“When I was a boy and I would see scary things in the news, my mother would say to me, ‘Look for the helpers. You will always find people who are helping’.”

PC Keith Palmer

Friends, colleagues and MPs have paid tribute to Keith Palmer, the policeman who was stabbed to death as he guarded the Palace of Westminster from a terrorist.

Palmer, 48, was a member of the Met's parliamentary and diplomatic protection command with 15 years of service as a police officer. The married father, believed to have been a member of the Royal Artillery before he joined the police, was unarmed when the lone attacker came charging towards him on Wednesday afternoon.

Conservative MP James Cleverly, who served alongside Palmer in the army, paid tribute to the "lovely man" he had known for a quarter of a century.

"I've known Keith for 25 years. We served together in the Royal Artillery before he became a copper," Cleverly wrote. "A lovely man, a friend. I'm heartbroken. My thoughts are with the family, friends and colleagues of PC Keith Palmer. A brave man."
